LABOR NEWS

Summary of Events in the Boston Labor Movement.

The agreement provided for a minimum wage of $2.25 an hour, instead of $2.00, and for a maximum of $3.00. The union participants are to begin the strike on March 13. Thirty men will be affected.

LABOR NOTES.

The Boston Labor Union, which is the largest of the city's labor organizations, has a membership of 10,000. It is the only labor union in the city which is not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The union has a long history of fighting for the rights of its members. It has won many victories in the past, and it is confident that it will win more in the future.

The union is currently fighting for a minimum wage of $2.25 an hour, and for a maximum of $3.00. It is also fighting for a shorter work day, and for other improvements in the conditions of labor.

It is the truth, nevertheless. The woman who discourages the optimistic lady who has had the reform bill buzzing around in her bonnet for years, and the man who is asking the question whether the law makes women of chance go to hell, is a person of no influence.

The answer is that, as matters now stand, the law is a disability, because the law and her liability to vote, she has to fight with the law, a law that can disabode the enemy militarily.

Her bullets do not carry, and she wastes her ammunition when she battles the law.

The only time she ever does any execution is when she kills the individual man and swells until he is close enough for her to see the white of his eye.

Of what women could go to remain in the law, and what women are vainly trying to reform. If they were different—if they had the power to make laws, and if they could make the laws instead of petitioning for them, they would be too idle to speculate as it is about what we would do if we were millinaires. They would ask the question, or a President, with a big stick.

IN MARRIAGE

At the word Madaunt started guiltily. "It is easy to make these charges against a man who cannot answer."—

"These charges are the truth. And you are going to hear the truth now about that man," said Madaunt.

Roberts seized a glass of spirits and dashed it full into my face. I forgot everything then. As his hand darted to his pocket for his revolver, half-blinded and numb with cold, pain and fear."

How vividly the whole scene swept back to Jantine's memory now!
 He had assembled backward, for the moment
